A Recruiting to do List for Underclassmen

1. As the student athlete moves from freshman to sophomore status, it is important that the player be in weight training and be present at all football functions as to expedite the learning process. The more the player know and understands the quicker they can get on to the field.
2. As the player moves from sophomore to junior, the above statement continues to hold true, however there are some other things that parents can now do to help their athlete.
 - a. The player should attend an MVP Camp or Scout Camp as this is the organization that gives the players their “STAR” rating.
 - b. The player should attend 1 Mega Camp, these are the most bang for your buck as there will be many college coaches in attendance.
 - c. The player should choose about 3 College camps to attend. These need to be the High School 1-day camp. It should also be a variety of level colleges not all Alabama/Georgia. We do not want to limit the players possibilities.

Just a caveat to these Recommendations, attending camps can be a double edge sword. If you are not ready to perform it can also hurt your recruiting. Athletes must be prepared to perform on command at these camps.

3. As the player moves from junior year to senior year, the player needs to begin to hone in on their skill level and focus. They still need to attend a mega camp, maybe 2, and an MVP camp to see if they can improve their “STARS”. Then the college camp circuit should be the colleges that have expressed an interest in them or that they are in constant contact with.
4. This is also the time that the players should be attending what is referred to as Junior Day, which are usually held on game days during the season.

If there is a question about a camp and your players attendance, please contact coach Garvin and he will gladly discuss the camp with you, and he will find out as much info about the camp as possible. It is important to choose the right camp. Players do not need to attend the 3- or 4-day camps offered by the University as these are usually money grabs. We want our players to go to the High School 1-day, High School Elite camps. The coaches are happy to help you choose the right camp for your athlete
