

Summer Assignments 2020-2021 AP Macro Economic Students

You are responsible for knowing all the reading material. This is not designed to ruin your holiday, but to give you an overall view of what we will be studying. You should be able to knock this out in a few days. We will quiz over all reading material the first week back from summer break.

Because the opportunity cost (yep, that is a thing) of studying during one's summer break is very high and that you most assuredly will be dedicating much of this material to your short term memory, I would suggest that you begin reading a week before school begins. However, if you are inclined to begin this reading while at the beach, rumor has it that Economics readings are quite the conversation starter. Read with care, caution and proper social distancing!

Here is what you requested...

1. Read one of the following: Freakonomics by Steven Levitt, Travels of a T-Shirt in the Global Economy by Pietra Rivoli, Superfreakonomics by Steven D. Levitt & Stephen J. Dubner or Moneyball, The Big Short or Flash Boys all of which are authored by Michael Lewis. If you are wanting a more behavioral approach to economics Nudge by Thaler and Sunstein or Phishing for Phools by Akerlof and Shiller. These can be found at many of the local libraries or, if you wish to purchase, can be acquired 2nd hand at a very reasonable price from various online book sites. Pretty hip beach reads too. The paperbacks fit very easily into beach bags.
2. Pick a day to listen to Marketplace Morning Report, Marketplace, or Marketplace Money (WABE 90.1 on your FM dial while in the metro ATL area) or online at //marketplace.publicradio.org. Write a brief summary (1/2 to 1 page) of a story or stories you listened to and give me your opinion/ take i.e... did you like it, dislike it, did you learn something, do you already know all there is to know, etc... P.S. I do not expect to read the same broadcast summary over and over again. If you like all this stuff login to <http://freakonomics.com/archive/> and check out a podcast or two just for fun.
3. I will distribute text books when we return to class.

My email should anyone wish to get in touch with me: decourcy.mark@mail.fcboe.org . As a general rule of thumb, I check my emails once a week or so during the summer.

Thanks for your apparent interest in the class! I am looking forward to getting started next year and leaving 2020 in the mirror.
